RUSSIAN SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA PLEASURES

Miss Emma Roberts Is Soloist at Concert at National.

The Russian Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Modest Altschuler, gave its first concert yesterday afternoon at the National Theater before a large audience. Miss Emma Roberts, a Southern girl, was the soloist.

The program, which was entirely Russian in character, was one of the most interesting of the season. Opening with the "Scherzo Fantasia" and continuing with "Scherzo Fantasia," a symphonic suite, Rimsky-Korsakoff's music was rendered in all its contrasting beauty. The chief theme of the "Scherzo Fantasia" suite is the sea motive, called by some the Sinfonia motive. It is proclaimed immediately and heavily in fortissimo unison and octaves. Then follows the main body of the movement, allegro non troppo, which begins with a combination of the chief theme, the sea motive, with a rising and falling Arpeggio figure, the Wave motive. There is a crescendo, and a modulation leads to the major. The ending of the first movement is very quiet.

The second movement, the "Scherzo Fantasia" suite, repeats the first movement in the basses and leads into an orientally colored intermezzo, with a most joyous ending in contrast with the first movement. The third movement is in simple romanza form, consisting of two folk songs. The finale opens with a reminiscence of the sea motive, followed by the "Scherzo Fantasia" suite, and leads into the "Festival at Bagdad." The "Festival at Bagdad" is a splendid climax, and then ends quietly in the development of the sea and wave motives.

Two Caucasion sketches by Liszt, "The Dance of the Fairies" and "The Dance of the Fairies," were followed most effectively by Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in G minor." Realizing its sonority and the martial qualifications of the work, Mr. Altschuler adapted it for the orchestra last summer. Yesterday was the first time a Washington audience had the pleasure of hearing this adaptation.

Tschakovsky's "Overture 1812" completed the program. "God Preserve Thy People," a Russian hymn, furnishes the opening theme, which is followed by fragments of the "Marche Slave." The second theme is brought forth after a stormy development of the first, a section of it being based on a folk-song of Novgorod. Finally the coda is reached, the time changing to Allegro vivace, and over the fanfare thunders the theme of the Russian national hymn. With this material the work is brought to a dramatic close.

Miss Roberts has a rich, well-rounded contralto voice. The audience was delighted with her interpretation of Rachmaninoff's little Russian folk-songs, as well as her more serious numbers by Arensky.

The President and Mrs. Wilson, with a party of friends, occupied one of the boxes.

The accompanist for Miss Roberts was Walter Charnikov, who is well known as a teacher in New York and Washington, and who has just returned from a tour with Mme. Elvina.

WANT "LITTLE THEATER" HERE

The Drama League Players again presented "The Tragedy of Hamlet," a three-act play by John Masefield, last night in the auditorium of the Wilson Normal School. Miss Edna Ellis, who played the title role of "Nan," explained that the league was trying to obtain funds for the erection of a "Little Theater," such as New York and other cities have.

FIGHTS FOR COMMISSION.

Chairman Adamson will make another effort to extend the life of the Railroad Investigating Committee. The committee yesterday reported a resolution, to extend the life of the committee until next December instead of for a year. It omitted a provision for the continuance in the committee of a salary for Representative Cullip, of Indiana, a member who was defeated at the last election.
